interpreting birds and related subject matter. Birds in Art is recognized globally as the exhibition setting the standard for avian art.

This travelling exhibition features 50 entries from the 47th annual Birds in Art exhibition. The full exhibition of work by 118 artists was presented at the Woodson Art Museum in Wasau, Wis., from September through November 2022. Three notable jurors evaluated nearly 1,000 images from 570 artists located around the world. Bronze, acrylics, oils, watercolor, linocut, sandstone, and other mediums are represented in the traveling exhibition.

"Partisan Divide", Philip Laber, 2010.

Philip Laber, former Professor Emeritus of Art at Northwest Missouri State, will showcase his works in the Musser McColm mansion. His exhibit, House of Cards, is a suite of experimental printmaking that examines, and metaphorically represents, American and global cultures and politics, and the resulting consequences upon daily life edited through the eyes of a mythical and whimsical "Everyman". The works are a hybrid approach that combines traditional etching and engraving processes with digital imagining and contemporary printmaking.

In the summer of 2016, Laber retired from teaching photography, printmaking, and drawing at Northwest Missouri State to become a full-time artist. His creative interests remain experimental printmaking and photography, and more recently, exploring acrylic painting. The public will have an opportunity to meet Philip Laber on Sunday, June 25, at the Friends Annual Ice Cream Social.

The Iowa Watercolor Society (IWS) traveling exhibition features the work of 30 Iowa watercolor artists, and judges have awarded first through fifth place winners along with Honorable Mentions and a winner for the Transparent category. The Iowa Watercolor Society (IWS) was organized in 1977 by a small group of enthusiastic watercolorists. IWS now celebrates well over 150 members and offers the opportunity for interested painters to network with artists statewide.

Artist Jo Myers-Walker, whose watercolor is included in this year's exhibit, will host a "toast" to the late watercolorist, Carol Steinmetz. Myers-Walker will lead a watercolor floral workshop in memory of Carol Steinmetz starting at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, July 22.
