Participants can receive help polishing their resumes, practice interview techniques, get tips on professional appearance, speak with career advisors, and explore entrepreneurial resources. Like the fair, this clinic is also free and open to the public, with no registration required.

"Preparation is the key to success, and we want to ensure job seekers have the tools to confidently approach both the application and interview process," Lindsay Trumbull, Director of Membership at GMCCI, said. "Pairing these two events strengthens the workforce pipeline for everyone involved."

"We're building on the momentum we've gained with our partners and member businesses in 2025. The job market in Muscatine is thriving, and these events offer a powerful platform to connect talent with opportunity. We encourage anyone exploring employment or new career options to attend and discover what's available right here in our community."

For more information, or if your business is interested in hosting a booth, please contact Lindsay Trumbull at ltrumbull@muscatine.com.
