LST 325 will depart Muscatine on Sept. 16 with two more stops before returning to their home port (Alton, Ill. Sept. 18-23 and Cape Girardeau Sept. 24-29).

PLEASE NOTE: Access to the downriver boat launch in Riverside Park will be unavailable to the public from September 8-16. The upriver boat launch will remain open for the public's use.

History of the ship

The LST (Landing Ship, Tank) played a critical role in transporting troops, tanks, vehicles, and supplies directly onto enemy shores during amphibious assaults. These ships were vital in operations such as the Normandy invasion on D-Day, where LSTs delivered men and equipment to the beaches of France.

Built in 1942, the LST 325 served in the European Theater, including participation in the invasion of Sicily and the D-Day landings in Normandy. After the war, the ship continued to serve in various capacities before being retired and eventually restored by a dedicated group of veterans and volunteers. Today, the LST 325 is preserved as a museum ship, based in Evansville, Indiana, and tours select river cities each year.

These ships could carry 20 Sherman tanks in the giant hold within the ship. They were the only ships ever made that could go anywhere in the world and deposit their cargo onto a hostile beach and then go get another load. On the main deck they could also carry 30-40 trucks, tons of fuel, ammunition or supplies and soldiers.

The LSTs were used during World War II, Korea, and the Vietnam conflicts. This ship, LST 325, was in the invasion at Omaha Beach on D-Day, June 6, 1944. It was also at Sicily on July 10, 1943. The United States never lost an invasion once the LSTs were designed, produced, and could land the big tanks right on the beach.

While in Muscatine, the ship will be docked along the Mississippi River and open for public tours. Visitors will be able to walk the decks, explore the troop quarters, view historic exhibits, and learn about the ship's role in some of the most pivotal moments of World War II.

"This is more than just a ship—it's a floating classroom and memorial," said representatives from the LST 325 Memorial. "It gives people of all ages the chance to connect with history in a way that books and movies simply cannot."

Community members are encouraged to mark their calendars for this rare and memorable event. Plan to spend part of the weekend of September 11-15, 2025 in Muscatine, IA this year. This ship is truly a piece of world history!
