Re: Muscatine Historic Preservation Commission Ordinance Amendment

INTRODUCTION:

The Muscatine City Council approved the third and final reading of an ordinance amendment establishing the Muscatine Historic Preservation Commission (MHPC) on September 21, 2000. Among other provisions, the amendment created a commission composed of seven members who each served three years. In compliance with state law, the individuals recommended for appointment to the commission by the mayor were required to “demonstrate a positive interest in historic preservation; should be drawn from professionals in architecture, history, architectural history, planning, prehistoric and historic archaeology, folklore, cultural anthropology, curation, conservation and landscape architecture or related disciplines to the extent that such professions are available; and may include other persons as have demonstrated special interest, experience or knowledge in history, architecture or related disciplines.”

Because of the special requirement for potential members to have a demonstrated interest or training in historic preservation or related field, the pool of applicants for openings on the MHPC can be more restrictive than for other city commission/board openings. In addition, the relatively short three-year term of a commission member causes frequent turnover. When coupled with the city’s policy of not allowing individuals to serve more than two consecutive terms, the potential for rapid membership turnover and inability to fill vacancies can occur.

That situation has happened this year. Because of resignations, the commission has been unable to fill two positions. That has hampered the MHPC in fulfilling its duties. Ten regular or special on either side of the ocean that equaled them" — Mark Twain meetings have been scheduled this year, but because a quorum was not present, as of October 15, only five of those scheduled meetings have been held.

BACKGROUND/RECOMMENDATION:

The State Historical Society of Iowa has reported there is no requirement that historic preservation commissions have seven members or be appointed for three-year terms. Based on the number of members who did attend MHPC meetings this year, a quorum would have been present at all ten of the scheduled meetings if the membership had been five instead of seven.

The city staff has developed a proposed ordinance amendment, which has been reviewed by city attorney Matt Brick, which would reduce the membership of the Muscatine Historic Preservation Commission from seven to five. The proposed amendment would also increase the term of each commission member from three to five years. To provide for staggered terms, two current members would have their existing terms extended so that the term of one commission member will expire each year over a five-year period. The proposed amendment would also require all future applicants and members to live within the city limits.
